

Experience Swedish culture first-hand (with a free glass of wine) in Woolwich, London's new creative district

We get it, what's in Woolwich you ask? artFix is in Woolwich, and that's all you need to know. It's only a 30-minute train ride from central London, and Woolwich is the upcoming place to be.

As Sweden celebrates Midsummer over the weekend 23rd-25th June, we have organised our very own Swedish Film Festival. This follows in the tradition of previous events we have organised, such as the Hungarian film festival.

Costing £2 per film, or £5 for the entire day and with a complimentary glass of wine for every ticket holder, this can't be missed! The programme will feature a series of documentaries, short and long feature films, all of which will be insightful, relevant and influential among today's emerging creatives and curious individuals.

One of the documentaries being shown at the festival is Trespassing Bergman, which offers an insight into the relationships several actors and directors had with director, writer and producer Ingmar Bergman.

Come and experience the festival for yourself with a free glass of wine and great company.

Full Program:

Friday:

Viskan Miracles 17:00 (Feature)

Director: John O. Olsson. Released: 2015, 106 mins

Bjarne and Malin live on the banks of the Ljungan. Bjarne's father-in-law Halvar lives on the other side of the river. Never having seen eye to eye, what could happen?

Saturday:

Underdog 13:00 (Feature)

Director: Ronnie Sandahl. Released: 2015, 100 mins

Dino, a young Swedish girl, has fled Swedish mass unemployment for a new life in Oslo. But like many other young immigrant Swedes, she finds herself as an outcast and surviving on little money, irregular work and hard partying.

Trespassing Bergman 15:30 (Documentary)

Director: Jane Magnusson, Hynek Pallas. Released: 2013, 107 mins

Ingmar Bergman's home on Fårö island occupies something of a mythical status among filmmakers. In Trespassing Bergman, some of the world's leading directors and actors, several on site at the house talk about their relationship with the demon director and his films.
