

“Four Seasons” live art battle exhibition at artFix Space

Celebrate raw artistic expression at artFix space in Soho for their “Four Seasons” free live art battle exhibition on the 6th of May from 7 to 9pm.

London, 30th April,

Every Tuesday artFix Space holds art battles during which two new artists of varied disciplines battle it out over 30 minutes to create the best art they can; you decide who wins. Each week a different theme is chosen as stimulus. For the past four weeks the theme has been one of the four seasons. We are now going to display the final pieces from all of the artists in our “Four Seasons” exhibition.

As well as all the live art created over the past four weeks, live outdoor performances, drinks and food are all on the line-up so it will be a festive affair. The live outdoor art battle will be between James John Jolly and Aisling McGarvey. Dancers Benjamin Sunarjo & Mara Natterer and the singer Louiza Lambrianide will also perform at artFix.

If you want to watch art materialise before your eyes for free, come to artFix Space in Soho on Wednesday the 6th of May from 7 to 9 PM.

About artFix

artFix is a London-based social enterprise with a strong mission: to make arts fun and affordable.

Drop in and enjoy a fix of art in an easy, affordable and fun way. The store displays both digital and physical artistic content from both visual and performing arts, giving visitors a taste of the arts from across the world. The space is also used for art classes, educational workshops and private hire events, bringing a creative space to local communities. By making arts accessible and available to a wide range of audiences, the artFix store functions as a taster device and marketing tool for cultural organisations and independent artists.
